

To whom it may concern, I subscribe to XM Radio by choice simply because I want to listen to what I want when I want to, and in a format I enjoy and have no trouble understanding. A lot of the "local" traffic and weather stations read their copy so fast that you don't have a chance to understand, much less comprehend it.

The broadcasters at XM give the traffic and weather slowly and in detail, and benefit me a lot more than the local channels do.

I pay for that service willingly, and I might even add, gratefully, and I have a right guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States of America, to do just that.

The local stations still have the benefit of local advertisers, and formats chosen by demographics. The fact that XM is providing a superior service should, just make them want to improve theirs.

Yours truly, John Pizzo
